REPUBLICAN TICKET.

FOR PRESIDENT,
JAMES A. GARFIELD,
OF OHIO.
FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,
CHESTER A. ARTHUR,
OF NEW YORK.

The Democrats will take to the woods in solid column this fall.

The Garfield clubs will be too much for the Democrats this fall.

The Wisconsin Presidential "idea" is a good one. It takes marvellously well.

The Democrats think there is little use of holding the Cincinnati Convention.

Mr. Tilden will never be in a frame of mind to condone the nomination of Garfield.

There is harmony all along the line in the Republican party over the nomination of Garfield.

It was not expected that the Republican Convention would select a candidate that would please the Democrats.

The country will find a little relief when Congress adjourns next Wednesday. Hot weather and Congress at the same time is a little too much.

The Chicago Tribune: Starting the Garfield boom was a proud feather in the cap of the Wisconsin delegation.

In Milwaukee there is a daily attendance of 11,092 children in the public schools, and 7,814 of that number are studying German.

The German Republicans in all the cities heartily rejoice over the nomination of Garfield. In fact everybody but Democrats rejoices over the nomination.

Well, there is no end to strange things. The New York Nation, a paper of great ability, but severely critical on public men, and especially the Republican party, says the nomination of Garfield is "a triumph for the cause of good government and constitutional and decent politics."

Senator Conkling has returned to Washington; he has talked freely about the nomination of Garfield, and considers him next to Grant in personal strength. He predicts that Garfield will carry New York by 50,000 over a united Democracy, but he says the Democrats will hardly be able to unite.

The Maryland Democrats adopted a platform in which they say that the people owe their return to prosperity to the blessing of God and their own increased economy, and not to the Republican party. But it appears that the Almighty has been particular to bless the Republican party with victory and common sense, while he has wholly neglected the Democratic party.

One of the differences between Garfield and Blaine so far as Congressional career is concerned, is this: Both began public life in Congress about the same time. Both were in very moderate circumstances. On a congressional salary which has not always been $5,000 a year, Blaine has managed to save more than "a quarter of a million," and Garfield about $20,000.

The coolest nomination ever made by the Democrats of Illinois is that of Trumbull, for Governor. Of course they don't expect to elect him, but they thought they would serve him once as the Wisconsin Democrats did Judge Doolittle in 1871, nominate him for Governor, have him badly beaten, and hence got out of the way. Trumbull is a political bore, and was justly described by President Lincoln in 1863 when he said: "I have three great troubles to bother me—one is the war in the South, the other is Horace Greeley in New York, but the worst pill of all is Trumbull in the Senate. The South wants to capture the Government by war; Greeley wants to capture the rebels with paper bullets, but Trumbull wants to capture everything for himself, and is a constant thorn in my side, worrying me about appointments."

A reasonable estimate places the number of visitors at the reunion in Milwaukee at 150,000. Judging from the vast crowds which thronged the streets for miles on Wednesday and Thursday, this estimate is not too great. It was a great enterprise for the hotels, railways and business houses in Milwaukee, but the whole affair so far as the soldiers were concerned, was badly managed. There was a scarcity of food at the camp, as well as of lodgings for the soldiers, which made it very unpleasant. If the soldiers, especially the members of the militia companies, were willing to pay their fares, give their time, and subject themselves to such duty as those in command might order, the managers of the reunion should have seen to it that the quarters at the camp were in as good a condition as possible, and that an abundance of provisions was supplied. On this point there are many loud complaints.

The number of ballots cast at the Convention at Chicago was greater than in any Republican Convention since the organization of the party. But a greater number of ballots have been cast in other National Conventions. In 1852 General Scott was nominated on the fifty-third ballot, and Franklin Pierce on the forty-ninth. The Charleston Convention in 1860 cast fifty-seven ballots and went to pieces without nominating anybody. Fremont was nominated on the first ballot, Lincoln on the third for his first term and on the first for his second term, Grant on the first for each term, Greeley on the sixth, and Hayes on the seventh. The first National Convention ever held in the United States nominated Henry Clay in 1831. William Wirt, Mr. Van Buren, General Harrison and Mr. Clay were subsequently nominated on the first ballot. Mr. Polk required nine. General Cass four, James Buchanan seventeen, and Horatio Seymour twenty-two ballots.

There were a great many interesting as well as happy incidents occurred in Milwaukee during the reunion, that are worth publication, but it would take a volume to contain them. Among the number is one related by Colonel W. B. Britton, of this city, the old commander of the 8th Wisconsin. One of the veterans of the 8th who attended the reunion wanted very much to meet General Grant, but had made himself believe the report that Grant would not shake hands with a private soldier—or in other words, that he would not receive him at General Hamilton's residence. Attending the reunion was another member of the 8th named Baker, who with a little more cheek than discretion, determined that his comrade should both see and shake hands with Grant. The two started for Hamilton's residence. When the door was reached and the bell rang, Baker pulled out a card bearing upon it his name, and then "high private Co. K, 8th Wisconsin." Mrs. Hamilton answered the call and the usher card was presented. They were ushered into the parlor, and in the meantime the card given to General Grant. Though surrounded by distinguished military men, and prominent citizens of Milwaukee in another room, he left their presence to receive these two "high privates." When the "Silent Man" and the best known man of the world, appeared before these old soldiers, he extended both hands and cordially and earnestly grasped theirs, when Baker began: "General Grant, this man has heard that you wouldn't shake hands with a private soldier, and I brought him to prove that the report was a lie." Grant assured them he was glad to meet them, and again warmly grasped their hands, when Baker again spoke: "General, I am a Democrat, but a Grant man, and I want the Chicago Convention to nominate you; but if you'll let the Cincinnati Convention use your name, we'll nominate you and elect you." The General very pleasantly remarked that he never was much of a Democrat, and said: "Now I have company in the other room waiting for me and must leave you. I am glad to have met you." The boys left the presence of the great man, proud of their achievement, and went away two of the strongest Grant men in Milwaukee.

A WORD ABOUT ARTHUR.
There are a few Republicans, and the number is very few—who think the Republican Convention did an unwise thing in nominating General Arthur for Vice President. Those who are not satisfied with the nomination do not know the man and are not acquainted with his public life or his private character. The objection to him possibly grows out of his removal from the Collectorship of the Port of New York two years ago next month when he was succeeded by Mr. Merritt. Those who know the facts in the case will be the last ones to charge General Arthur with any dishonest practice while he held that important office.

A greater part of all the custom receipts of the United States are collected by the Collector of the Port of New York. They amount to tens of millions every year. It is a responsible position, and with it comes great political influence which some times may be abused. When President Hayes issued his famous civil service order No. 1, which was so much out of place, and so impracticable as to create ridicule among thinking men, General Arthur refused to obey it. He took the ground that the President of the United States had no right to dictate to him what course he should take in regard to political conventions and the like. A strict obedience to the order would have prevented him from taking an active part in any of the movements to carry New York for the Republicans. General Arthur asserted his manhood, and his right to do as he pleased in caucuses and conventions so long as his conduct was within the scope of propriety. He therefore declared that he would not pay any attention to the President's order and would rather sacrifice the office than sacrifice his independence. President Hayes thereupon removed him.

This led to an investigation of the management of the New York Custom House. A committee was selected for that purpose. The investigation was made, and it was the unanimous opinion of the committee that the management of that great office was matchless for economy and ability. And John Sherman, who supported the President in his civil service policy, publicly said that the management of the New York Custom House by General Arthur was a model for its excellence, and could not be improved. These are the facts about General Arthur and the Custom House and they should be thoroughly understood by every Republican.

Arthur is a power in New York politics for the reason that the people have confidence in him. He is a man of fine ability, of many accomplishments, of wonderful enterprise and indomitable energy, and is a successful lawyer. When he was appointed Collector of the Port of New York, in November, 1871, he was unanimously confirmed, but when he was reappointed in 1875, he had filled the position with such remarkable ability, that his second nomination was not even referred to the usual committee—a compliment usually reserved for ex-United States Senators—and beside this, every member of the Senate voted heartily for his confirmation.

GARFIELD'S RECORD.

Under Debate in the House—Hayley and Williams vs. Cox and Carlisle.

WASHINGTON, June 11—There was a debating society in the House to-day. It was originally upon the deputy marshal bill, but took a political turn of the broadest character before it finished. General Hayley, of Connecticut, and Mr. Williams, of Wisconsin, were the chief speakers upon the Republican side, while Sunset Cox, of the Democrats, led from the other side.

HOME AGAIN.

Special to the Gazette.

CLEVELAND, June 12—Mr. Garfield arrived at his home at the farm near Mentor at 10 o'clock last evening, and enjoyed the first undisturbed night's rest he has had since the convention. He is given a formal reception to-day, there being a procession, speech making, etc., with all becoming enthusiasm.

A CALAMITY.

Special to the Gazette.

PROVIDENCE, June 12—The steamer Narragansett, of the Stonington line, bound for New York to the Stonington, collided last night off Green Point, Long Island, with the steamer Pointing, of the same line, and took fire and burned to the water's edge and sank. The passengers who arrived say that only thirty passengers were saved.

New York, June 12—The officers of the Stonington line say the passengers were taken off the Narragansett by the steamers City of New York and City of Boston, and that none were injured and none lost.

BEN HARRISON.

The Break for Garfield in the Chicago Convention Explained.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 11—In an interview this evening touching the manner of General Garfield's nomination, General Harrison gave the following account of it: "When I got into the Convention I asked Garfield if anything had been done, and was told nothing. What can we do? We received no satisfactory response. We went into balloting, and an effort was made by Massachusetts to give Sherman a send off with 21 votes, but he failed to gain any strength from it. After the thirty-fourth ballot had been taken, the Chairman of the Wisconsin delegation asked me to help him 17 votes for Washburne, and it nothing came of it, he would then throw them for Garfield if I would support him. I told him I would feel around and see what could be done, and when Indiana was called, gave Washburne nine or ten votes, but they had no effect. Seeing this, and realizing the utility of struggling with him, Wisconsin cast her Washburne votes for Garfield. He received 50 all told on that ballot, but even then the movement did not appear to make much headway.

On the thirty-sixth ballot Connecticut came in early with eleven votes, but even then they were not followed by any immediate effect. Indiana only gave eight of her anti-Grant votes, but when Illinois followed with 29 for Garfield it began to strike the delegates there was something in it, and the chairman came to me asking if Indiana meant to stand by that vote. Being assured that she did, changes were rapidly made to the Garfield column and the day was won. The issue was the result of no combination except the one I have described, and which was ventured as an experiment. After the Garfield movement began there was not time for a dispatch to have passed between Chicago and Washington to affect the result, and all these stories about this or that candidate having originated the break are pure inventions. The break was spontaneous, originating itself, so to speak."

A FIELD OF FLAME.

The Oil Tanks of Titusville Again in Flames—Loss Estimated at $500,000.

TITUSVILLE, Pa., June 11—A very destructive, and still threatening, petroleum fire is now raging. It originated about 8 o'clock this morning. One of the iron tanks on the South Side being struck by lightning. The tank belonged to the Tidouite and Titusville Pipe Line Company, and contained 20,000 barrels of oil. The loud report, followed by the dense volume of flame and smoke, aroused the whole city, and measures were taken but in vain to restrain the progress of the fire. Soon after two of the five other tanks near by, containing each 18,000 barrels of crude oil were in flames, and rivers of oil ran down to the creek, and the whole hill was hid in black darkness, and lurid flashes of flame played like lightning on clouds. About noon the Acme refinery on the South side took fire, and the devouring elements then raged with uncontrolled fury. Fortunately the exertions of the fire department here prevented the fiery mass crossing the creek, where there are still several hundred thousand barrels of storage oil and refined oil in stock. If they escape, and the wind continued favorable, the Oil Creek depot and bridges, and the various work shops, will reach $500,000. The Acme Oil Company being a heavy loser, also the Keystone Oil Company, and the Octave, as well as Grandin Brothers, of Tidouite. A steam and oil hauler and men of the fire department of Corry are here lending assistance, and the ladies are serving the gallant boys with sandwiches and coffee while they battle with the fire fiend.

WARNING TO CADETS.

WEST POINT, June 11—A portion of the address of the Secretary of War to the graduates to-day was significant in view of the Whitaker case. It was as follows: "It is preeminently the duty of the graduates of this academy, who are beneficiaries of all our people, to symbolize their faith in the vital source of our nation's strength, the equality of manhood by recognizing the right of all persons, of whatever condition, to strive for the attainment of such a position as their abilities and desires may warrant. It is an ignoble thing to be governed by imaginary superiority over any of our less fortunate fellow citizens born of adventurous circumstances, and thrice ignoble to make active exhibition of so unworthy a sentiment by opposing those we may deem beneath us. A true manhood dictates the extending of a helping hand to lift up the lowly, and words of encouragement to those who are struggling to elevate themselves. I ask you, my young friends, to give some thought to these suggestions, and to cultivate, not only love of country, but as well a love for the sentiment of which our country was born."

The address was loudly applauded. As the diplomas were awarded, Cadets Wilcox, Tate and Burnett were vociferously cheered by the corps when they advanced to take their diplomas. This was significant because upon these cadets Whitaker had cast suspicious glances.

GRANT AT GREEN BAY.

GREEN BAY, June 11—General U. S. Grant and party arrived here at 5:30 this evening on a special train on the Wisconsin Central Railroad. He was received by a committee, and at once driven to the residence of ex-Senator Howe, on Maine street. A few ladies and gentlemen of Milwaukee and Green Bay were in his car. The enthusiasm along the line was immense, and crowds had collected at every station, who cheered lustily. The General appeared upon the platform at each station, and waved recognition of the citizens. The formal reception occurs here tomorrow.

A GREAT CRIME.

EAST SAGANAW, June 11—Tuesday morning the house of Patrick Clark, a farmer of Lakefield Township, this county, was burned to the ground and the remains of Clark's wife were found in the ruins. Suspicion of foul play arose among the neighbors and detectives were employed to ferret the matter out. An investigation was made and inquest held, which resulted in the arrest of his brother Peter, who is suspected of murdering the couple and burning the building to hide the heinous deed. The testimony before the Coroner shows that there was a bad feeling between the brothers, which had existed for some time.

TEXAS OUTLAWS.

Four Men Lynched in Brown County—A Saloon Keeper Shoots the County Judge.

MARSHALL, Texas, June 11—A report from White Ranch says four men were hanged in the upper edge of Brown county yesterday by a mob, it is believed for crookedness with cattle.

GRAHAM, Texas, June 11—E. B. Morris, County Judge of Taylor county, was shot and instantly killed in the Court House at Seymour yesterday by W. A. Taylor, a saloon keeper. Taylor escaped.

A CONFERENCE.

LAKE GENEVA, June 10—The Beloit convention of Congregational and Presbyterian Ministers has been convened here for the past two days. A large number have been in attendance. Among the eminent divines from abroad were Rev. George Bushnell, Prof. H. M. Whitney, Beloit; Rev. Joseph Colville, of Delavan; Rev. P. P. Sawin, of Janesville; Rev. D. B. Conkling, of Whitewater, and Prof. James Blaisdell, of Beloit College.

The convention closed yesterday with a picnic and excursion around Geneva Lake.

FOR LIFE.

YANKTON, June 11—Acting Governor Hand has commuted to imprisonment for life the death sentence of W. L. Conk, of Deadwood, convicted of the murder of Miss Collison.

BROUGHT TO TIME.

How An Iowa Father Facilitates Business.

St. Louis Republican.
There is no foolishness about some of the fathers of Dubuque county, Iowa, who have marriageable daughters, and they know how to precipitate business when the fruit is ripe for plucking and hangs, wasting its sweetness, when it should be plucked. Matters were brought to climax with a rush at a certain farmer's residence in Vernon township recently. A young steller of the soil had for months been paying most assiduous attentions to one of his daughters, but he was such a bashful, modest chap, never having been much in company of girls, except this one, that he had never been able to raise his courage sufficiently high to pop the question.

He had gone to the house in which the lady lived at least on twenty different occasions, resolved to know his fate, but when ushered into the presence of the fair one, in whose keeping he had placed his heart, his courage would invariably "go back" on him, and he would return to his lonely room in greater suspense than before. Upon the evening in question he had determined that, come what would, he would tell his Mary that he loved her. He would once for all decide the matter, but as on each former occasion, he could not get the proposal further than his throat. There it stuck, and he determined to gulp it down and give up the siege, when the door opened and in walked the girl's father, who advanced to where they were sitting and thus addressed them:

"It came out to put a stop to this foolishness. It ain't cheap 'expenses I'm lookin' at, for coal is cheap and wood can be had for the haulin', but I'm sick and tired of this billin', and coon', like a pair of sick doves, keepin' me awake at nights, and it's got to be stopped right here. Do you love John Henry well enough to marry him?" "Why, father, I—I must—" "Stop that foolishness!" yelled the old man. "Answer yes or no, and quick too. It's got to be settled now or never." "Well—but, father, don't you know—if you'll only wait, and—" "Dry up, answer yes or no. Speak!" roared the old gen. "Well, then, yes; there now, and Mary again bid her face." "That's business!" said the way to talk. "Now, John, look here—look up here, or I'll shake you all to pieces. Do you want that gal o' mine for a wife? Speak out like a man now!" "Why, Mr.—, ain't this rather—I mean can't you?" "Speak it out, or out of this house you'll go head foremost. I won't wait a minute longer. There's the gal, and there ain't a hickler gal in the states, an' you just heard her say that she wanted you. Now, John, I won't stand a bit of foolin'. Once for all, yes or no?" "Well, yes, sir. I have been presumptuous enough to hope that I—" "Oh, stop your soft talk; the thing is settled now. You two fools would have been six months more at the job than I have done in five minutes. I never saw such foolin' as there is among young people nowadays. Ain't like when I was young—an' now, good night. You can talk the thing over, an' you an' me, John, 'I'll go up to town an' get the license to-morrow. Soon be time to get to plowin'; no time for love making then. Good night, good night. I hope I wasn't too rough, but I was determined to fix the thing one way or t'other, and the old man went back to bed.

Now that the ice was broken, the young people laid all their plans for the future, and John felt just a little bad at the comfort he had lost when Mary looked up at him shyly, and said:

"This would have been all right months ago, John, if you hadn't been so skeery. I knowed all the time that you wanted to ask me, but it wasn't my place to say anything, you know."

—The old, old story, Joseph Cook, drunk and disorderly. It was five days this time.
—Assistant Engineer Berg, of the La Crosse fire department, is in the city, and called on the boys last evening.

—To-morrow evening at Court Street Methodist church there is to be a children's service, of special interest and free for all.

—Miss Francis Willard will speak next Monday at 3 p. m. in the Baptist parlors. All women interested in temperance are invited to be present.

—The members of the Janesville City Republican Club are requested to meet at Bennett & Sale's office on Monday evening, June 14, at 8 o'clock.

—Rev. A. J. Mead, the new Presiding Elder, who succeeds Rev. W. P. Stowe, is on the grounds, and will settle here as soon as he finds a house to suit him.

—We received a pleasant call from Geo. Harvey, of Chicago, a former Janesvillian, this morning. He still thinks Janesville is one of the best places in the whole West.

—The feeling against wooden awnings is growing, and it will not be many years before all will join in doing away with these sheds which so cumber up the streets.

—Mr. Ashcraft has been improving his furniture store wonderfully by building an addition onto the rear, and tearing away his front office. The store is larger now and the stock shows up much better.

—One of the Guards, tired out with the transpiring and perspiring of the reunion, went to sleep yesterday noon and did not wake up until 7 o'clock this morning. They have now chastened him "the sleeping beauty."

—Amateur Equestrienne. In answer to your inquiry it must be said that the canter is the only gait at which any true lady will ride. Does our correspondent not realize that the only natural and appropriate seat for a lady's horse is a gallop.

—Governor Smith has appointed A. D. Hendrickson a delegate from Wisconsin to the seventh annual Conference of Charities to be held in Cleveland on the 29th inst. A good choice, and one which indicates the confidence which is felt in Mr. Hendrickson's ability and integrity.

—Forbes' dramatic company to-night give "Aa Whitcomb." Those who enjoy real fun, who delight in true comedy, should be on hand. The play is laughable, and from the well earned reputation of the company, there seems no doubt they will handle it well. Forbes is so well known through this part of the country that he needs but little puffing. The people expect a pleasant entertainment from him.

—John Tetlow, who eight years ago left here for Kansas, returned yesterday for a short visit with friends. He has become a fixture in Smith county, where he now owns a fine farm, with all the modern improvements, and is located near railroad stations. Last year of peaches alone he had over thirty bushels, which strikes a person rather oddly when one stops to think that when Mr. Tetlow went there there was nothing but grass—not a tree or shrub, and buffaloes and wolves occupied the land at will. Now there are shade trees, fruit trees, and all the conveniences of the best civilization. None here were more glad to see Mr. Tetlow than Wail King, who went with him on his first trip to Kansas by team.

Newly furnished, everything the best, Astor House, New York.

H. A. Stone, the census enumerator for the third ward has completed his work and finds 1239, but will wait before making his return, for one new comer to the town, so as to make the figures even.

N. E. Bennett has completed the fifth ward enumeration and finds there are 1015 inhabitants.

"JO IS NO FOOL."

Last night Jo Cook was on the war path again and was raising a small cyclone, and there is no way of judging how the tumult might have gone, had not Officer Pratt suppressed him. Pratt is not afraid of him and when he "tickles Jo, that ends it. Last night he landed his prisoner safely at jail, and while waiting for the turnkey to come and open up the door leading to the cells, Pratt occupied himself with talking through the diamond hole in the door, with Jim Snell. Jo seemed to be quietly waiting to be assigned to his room, and Pratt got off his guard. As quick as thought Jo sprang to the wicket door which was open, and through which they had just passed, and the key being in the lock Jo shut the door, turned the bolt, took out the key, left the officer locked in, and with a proud shout of triumph—"I tell you Jo Cook is no d-d fool," he slipped out of jail, and left the officer in his place. The turnkey soon came and released the officer, who soon ran down his man again, and this time he placed no confidence in him but watched him closely till he was in for sure. To-day Jo was sentenced to five days in jail, and the officer again saw him locked up in safety.

MISS GAVIN'S READINGS.

Next Monday night Miss Emilie Gavin, the noted elocutionist, is to give an evening's entertainment at the Opera house. She is certainly grand, and those who miss hearing her will miss a most healthful and inspiring entertainment. Her programme does not seem to be quite as good as those presented before in this city, and it is to be hoped that she may change some of the numbers for better ones, but there are two selections, either of which will amply repay one for sitting through the whole evening, if there was nothing else. The trial scene from Henry VIII, and the sleep walking scene from Macbeth will give the audience a chance to see her rare power, and any who can sit unmoved during these, must be made of stone. The following is the programme.

Piano duet, Fantasia on Airs from—"Il Trovatore."

Misses Battle and Johnson.

The Duet Snake.—F. B. O'Reilly. Curing a Cold and Reflections at the Grave of Adam.—Mark Twain.

Duet, "O'Connell's"—Gottschalk.
